Is there a way to dispose properly of our Catholic religious images? Yes, there is. But, before we get to that, I offer an explanation as to why this is the topic of my article for this week.

If we are like the average Catholic, we may find that our collection of religious images can build up. Sometimes, they are things we choose to use for our own personal prayer and devotion. Others are things that may have been passed down to us and have become family heirlooms. However, a good majority of the time, we may find that a good portion of our collection consists of images and booklets that we may have received through the mail. Those are oftentimes the things that can “pile up” and we do not know what to do with them.

The first option, of course, is to share them with others. This becomes a way we can evangelize and even catechize. We know people who may need a specific prayer. We know people who may have fallen away from the Church and need gentle nudges to bring them back. We know people who may need the help of a specific saint or people who are confused and simply seeking answers. We also know people who genuinely desire to grow deeper and stronger in their faith. We can therefore share those religious images with those who may need them.

But, what happens when those things pile up so quickly that we cannot keep up with them? Try as we may, it can sometimes be that our collection keeps growing much faster than we can share those images with the ones who may need them. Added to this, we may even find that our friends, relatives, and neighbors have already received similar things in the mail and so their own collection is growing. In the end, we find that everyone is in the same situation.

So, when this happens, many people's first instinct is to leave them in church—in the pews, in the literature racks, or whatever table or surface they may find. For one, the thought is that there must be someone in church who might need them. However, it can be one of those instances where we might be “preaching to the choir.” In other words, the people who come to church are not those who need those religious images the most.

Second, the people coming to church might also know people who might need the comfort of the religious images that are left in church. However, it is oftentimes the case that those same disciples have received the very same images or literature through the mail. In other words, they have their own collection to liquidate and so, rather than piling up at home, the pile builds up in church.

Third, the final reason people might use is they can leave it up to the priest, the sisters, or the paid staff of the church to deal with the disposal of unwanted or unneeded religious images. However, contrary to what people might think, the disposal of sacred images is something that any person can do. I now offer several proper ways to dispose of blessed images.

The simple “rule of thumb” is to make sure that a religious image of any kind cannot be used for sacrilegious purposes. If an image—picture, statue, prayer book, etc.—has been blessed by a priest or deacon, the blessing is removed once the object is destroyed or can no longer be recognizable as a sacred image. With that in mind, here are ways any one of us can do when it comes to religious images that we may no longer be able to use or give away.

STATUES/IMAGES: If they can be burned, this would be the best and most reverent way. If not, statues and images can be destroyed in such a way that they will no longer be recognizable as a sacred image and, therefore, not be used for sacrilegious purposes. The pieces can then be put into a dark colored bag and thrown away. Again, the blessing is removed as soon as the image is no longer identifiable as a sacred image. In the cases of statues/images, when in doubt, you can consult a priest.

PRINTED PICTURES AND/OR PRAYER BOOKS: Chances are, though, the majority of sacred images that any one of us may need to dispose of would consist of printed pictures and/or prayer books. Those are simple enough to handle at home.

If you have a shredder at home, one way would be to shred the pictures and/or pages of the devotional books. Another way would be to burn them—in a fireplace, in a grill, or even a fire pit. Once burned, you simply need to pound the ashes so the images are no longer recognizable. If you do not have the means to burn them yourself, they can always be burned along with the old palm branches before the start of Lent.

"Who Do You Say That I Am?"

March 22-24, 2019

Retreat Master Mary McKeon
An Ignatian, Silent Retreat for Men

Knowing about Jesus is part of our faith development; coming to intimately know Jesus leads to spiritual depth and transformation. Scripture, silence, and prayer are key to meeting Jesus heart to heart. This retreat is about your personal response to the question Jesus asks His disciples, "Who do you say that I am?"

Meet Mary McKeon

Mary McKeon is a member of Bellarmine's ministry staff, a spiritual director, and coordinator of women's ministry. Mary is a graduate of Marquette University. She taught school in Milwaukee's inner city before moving to Washington, DC to work for the United States Senate. She and her late husband have a daughter, son-in-law and three grandsons who are the joy of her life. Mary received her training as a spiritual/retreat director at the Jesuits' Manresa Retreat House in Bloomfield Hills, MI, where she served on the ministry team and became their first Director of Women's Ministry. In 2014, Mary was honored with Manresa's Lifetime Achievement Award.

CYCLES OF FAITH

3rd Sunday in Ordinary Time

"He came to Nazareth, where he had grown up." Did you grow up in a small town? Whenever you see stories of tight-knit communities, a common refrain is that everybody knows everybody and that's very difficult to change. If you leave and return, people expect you to be and act a certain way, and it's strange for them if you do not. In today's Gospel, we see that Jesus was already moving "in the power of the Spirit and news of him spread throughout the whole region. He...was praised by all." His ministry has begun! News of his growing popularity must have preceded him to Nazareth.

Upon his arrival, he "went according to his custom into the synagogue on the sabbath day." For the first few moments, he is what they expect - their hometown boy returning to pay his respects. As was common of men at the time, he takes a turn reading a passage of Sacred Scripture. It is a bold passage, one he selects intentionally. "He unrolled the scroll and found the passage where it was written: The Spirit of the Lord is upon me." After reading about holy anointings, liberation for the poor and prisoners, and physical healings, Jesus does the unthinkable. "Today this Scripture passage is fulfilled in your hearing."

We are all called to imitate Christ wherever we are. This might mean doing the unexpected! All too often we're content with the daily status quo, and so are the people around us. When we take a stand for Christian values, change our lifestyle to reflect the Gospel, and work for justice in society, we may make others uncomfortable. But Jesus doesn't call us to the same life we lived yesterday or the year before that. He is calling all of us - each and every one of us - to deeper conversion of heart. No matter what other people expect, will you love in the Spirit of the Lord today?

REST IN PEACE

Our blessed Lord has called home Mary Alice Klein and Lawrence Littel for whom we promise our prayers that they may live in joy in His presence.
